There was a meeting on Tuesday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Kruger, of several ladies in this locality to get up a musicale in the interest of a hospital to be located in Abington village. There were a dozen or more ladies present and much enthusiasm was shown. It is expected that the musicale will be on April 27th, in the auditorium at the High school.

H. M. Geyer will sell a car load of Ohio horses at the Springhouse hotel on Monday next.

Ogontz and Ashbourne

TERRITORY INCREASED.

By a decree of the court of Montgomery county, the territory west of the railroad and between Jenkintown and Glenside, formerly belonging to Abington township, has been made a part of Cheltenham township. As all the revenues for the current year had been collected before the decision of the court was announced, the children residing in this territory must continue to attend the Abington schools for the remainder of this term. At the opening of the term of 1912-1913 they will become pupils of the Cheltenham schools in accordance with the law governing such cases. This change will bring a considerable number of new pupils into our Wyncote and Glenside schools.

With the increase in scholars in all probabilities it will necessitate the enlarging of the new school at Glenside. When this school was built only a couple of years ago it was so arranged that it could be added to without rearranging the plans and the lot which is situated on the Germantown and Willow Grove pike is amply large.

POLICE NEWS.

James Clark, of Philadelphia, was arrested by Nightwatchman McKenna, of Ogontz, on Monday night, acting in a suspicious manner. After being kept over night in the lock-up he was discharged with a warning to keep out of the township.

A passenger riding on a trolley car offered the conductor a dollar bill, and, demanded his change. "I can't do it," said the conductor, and as the man triumphantly started to tuck the bill back in his pocket, continued, "but I can change that five you have in your wallet." The man laughed. "If you cannot change a dollar, how in the name of the saints can you change a five?" The conductor produced a $2.50 gold piece, 45 cents in change and two dollar bills. "Here is your change, sir," he said as he took the fiver.

WILLOW GROVE.

NEW IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION AT CRESTMONT.

The property owners and taxpayers at Crestmont held a largely attended meeting at the residence of G. Auer, on Thursday evening, March 14th, and organized an Improvement Association, with the following officers: C. Arlington, president; W. R. Keims, vice president; A. Wieland, secretary, and J. F. Walsh, treasurer. The association will at once urge the improvements of roads and installation of lights, fire plugs, etc. Inasmuch as the property owners have taken care of the sidewalks in the past, a special request is made to drivers of teams that they remain in the roadbed hereafter and not drive upon the well-kept sidewalks of the residents, thus defacing the same.

Another meeting was held at the home of W. J. Rust on Thursday evening, when matters for the further development of the association were considered.

There will be very few improvements made at the park this season.

Mrs. Anna Baum, of Germantown, was a visitor in the village on Thursday.

The Willow Grove M. E. parsonage has been brightened up with a coat of paint.

Mrs. Ella Margerum is ill at the home of her son, Albert, on Moreland road.

At the Rothwell durg store you can see a fine display of Easter cards and candy.

An entertainment will be given by the members of the McKinley Memorial church in the church building this Saturday evening.

The family of Eli Fluck, of Hatboro, has moved into the upper part of Henry Specht's brick house, facing on the Doylestown pike.

Mrs. Daniel Gephardt, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Joseph Brown, of Willow Grove, were visiting friends in Hartsville, on Wednesday.

Mrs. Linton Saurman has rented from the J. C. Robinson estate, both Parkside and Edenfield on Park avenue, for the coming season and is looking forward to a good year's work.

Note the card of John G. Crawford, our shoemaker, in this issue. Mr. Crawford is still at the old stand and is glad to accommodate all his old customers and as many new ones as would be pleased to give him their work.

On next Tuesday evening a meeting of the Willow Grove Improvement Association will be held at the club house, when the election of officers and other important matters for the further development of the association will be considered. Attorney Samuel H. High will be present and will give advice upon a very important subject. All the citizens of the village are requested to be present.

A debate will be given in the McKinley Memorial church by members of the Busy Bee club on Saturday evening, April 6th. The question to be discussed will be: Resolved, "That the pen is more useful to the United States than the sword." C. A. Cabell and Richard Jones, Negative, Watson T. Walker and Robert G. Hyde. A small admission fee of ten cents will be charged. Proceeds for the benefit of the building fund.

S. Harvey Dennison, one of Willow Grove's most popular young men, was married to Miss Dorothy Ott, of 4556 N. 20th street, Philadelphia, on Wednesday evening, by Rev. Mr. Channel, pastor of St. Stephen's M. E. church. Miss Keziah Weeks of Hatboro, acted as bridesmaid. The happy couple at once departed on their wedding trip. The groom, who is a past grand of Loller Lodge, No. 338, I. O. O. F., of Hatboro, and one of its most active workers, was presented with a handsome silver pitcher and tray by members of this organization.

BUCKINGHAM STATION ROBBED.

Buckingham's railroad station was broken into on Tuesday night by thieves who got away with the money in the telephone machine and with some cigars from the ticket office.

Station Agent Charles Knowles discovered the theft on Wednesday morning about 5.30 when he opened up. The telephone had been torn out and was found some distance away from the station. It is not believed the thieves got more than $2 from it.

About three years ago the station was broken into and a similar robbery perpetrated.

McCLOSKEY GETS CONTRACT.

At a special meeting of the Springfield township commissioners on Monday afternoon at the township building, Chestnut Hill, bids were opened for the construction of the reinforced concrete bridge over Sandy Run on Pennsylvania avenue, Oreland.

Bids were received from R. J. McCloskey, of Flourtown, and Harry H. Kluck, of Germantown. The bid of John Guntach, of Oreland arrived after the advertised time to receive bids and was therefore not considered. The first two bids were read and discussed and on motion the contract for the erection of the bridge was awarded to Robert McCloskey, of Flourtown, for a price of $660. The bridge is to be 16 feet wide and work is to be completed just as rapidly as weather will permit.

EARLY MORNING FIRE DESTROYED DWELLING

No One at Home When Flames Gutted House of Mrs. Guggenheim at Willow Grove—J. Martin Woolsey, the Tenant, was in New York.

Early Sunday morning last fire destroyed the brick house of Mrs. Elizabeth Guggenheim near the Plank road toll gate, Willow Grove.

The blaze was discovered shortly after midnight and had gained such headway that the firemen of Willow Grove and Abington found it impossible to save the building or contents. No one was in the house when the fire started and its origin is a mystery.

The property has been tenanted lately by J. Martin Woolsey, a writer, who lived alone. As he was not seen during the fire the report spread that Woolsey had perished in the flames.

Sunday afternoon while men were searching the ruins for the body of Woolsey, who was supposed to have died in the fire, the aged author made his appearance, having gone to New York the night before on business without acquainting any one of his intentions.

Among other things burned was the material for a book, which Woolsey, the author, was preparing for publication. His valuable library was also destroyed.

The loss is placed at $3000.

Author Woolsey is a member of the Folk Lore Society of London, and of the Folk Lore Society of New York. His chief claim to literary prominence came in 1910, when he won a $10,000 cash prize with the publication of his book, "The Garden of Eden, or the Discovery and Final Solution of the Mystery of the Woman, the Tree and the Serpent." The work created wide comment, particularly when it became known that the writer was a man 80 years of age. The book is mythological, theological and scriptural in its conceptions. Since that time Woolsey has written and published "The Discovery of Noah's Ark" and the "Ancient City."

In the house there was a considerable quantity of curios, odd furniture, etc., which Woolsey had stored in the place.

Isaac Russell, the veteran Democratic leader, is reported to be seriously ill with erysipelas at his home, Germantown and Highland avenues, Chestnut Hill.

To hold him as a witness against his brother, Amar Loux, of New Hope, who is wanted for the larceny of a farming implement, William Loux is in jail at Doylestown.

Joseph Taylor has been awarded the contract to erect two stores on Bellevue avenue, Langhorne, for William B. Parry, as an annex to the Parry building.

NEW CHURCH PLANNED.

The first Baptist church, of Lansdale, has in mind the erection of a new house of worship, or remodeling and enlarging the present edifice. A building fund has been gathering for several years past. The latest source of encouragement in that direction is the fact that Henry G. Keasbey, who is now traveling abroad, has written a letter to Pastor Newell, of the church, offering $100 when the building fund shall have been increased to $1600. This fund has reached pretty substantial figures, and it is likely that real action will soon be taken in the erection of the new house of worship. Mr. Newell has recently resigned the pastorate of the church to accept the pastorate of the Baptist church at Allentown, N. J. He and his family will leave Lansdale about May 1.

FRIENDS' FARM CAN BE SOLD

Property Belonging to Abington Meeting, Now Used by Country Club.

The Montgomery county court has decreed that Abington Friends may sell off portions of their property of 120 acres acquired in 1688 from John Barns.

Permission is given to Samuel M. Jarrett, Samuel Noble, Isaac P. Mather and Henry W. Hallowell, surviving trustees of the Abington Monthly Meeting, to sell at private sale 1.142 acres to Israel H. Ely for $6100; and five-eighths of an acre to Emma L. Hallowell for $3125. The trustees in their petition, asking leave to sell, recited the transactions whereby the property came into their possession and declare that the tract of 120 acres in Abington township adjoins Jenkintown, is surrounded by suburban improvements of the highest and most valuable character and many years ago it ceased, because of its greatly increased value, to be available for farming or agricultural purposes, and cannot be made to yield an annual income much in excess of the taxes thereon or in any wise commensurate with its present value; that the portion of the premises that is to be sold it not used and is never likely to be used or required for meeting house, burying or school purposes, and cannot be made to yield an annual income much in excess of the taxes thereon or in any wise commensurate with its present value; that the portion of the premises that is to be sold it not used and is never likely to be used or required for meeting house, burying or school purposes, and can not

A FREAK of FRIENDSHIP

BY LINDA M. STEVENS

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

With unconcealed admiration, Trescott watched a smartly gowned woman move leisurely through the tearoom throng. He was tremendously pleased when he saw her nod and smile to his friend, Florence Catherwood, and accept a seat at her table. The woman might have been on the shady side of 40, but she looked scarcely 30 in her pale gray costume with chinchilla trappings. Her face was rarely beautiful under the soft dark waves of hair, and the only tell-tale was the sad, drooped mouth with every pathetic line accentuated. She opened her coat, displaying fascinating glimpses of a lace-befrilled blouse, and from her neck dangled a barbaric jeweled chain. There was something singularly attractive in this woman, with her tragic dark eyes and sorrowful mouth, and Trescott's languid interest in the surrounding bustle was awakened, so he rose and crossed swiftly to Mrs. Catherwood's table.

She introduced him to her friend, Mrs. Fox of New Orleans, and Trescott sat down without invitation, only conscious of meeting a pair of beautiful gray eyes. Then he began to wonder if he had been asleep the last few months, for Mrs. Fox, to his eager, earnest question, replied that she had been in New York since early fall.

Florence Catherwood smiled indulgently at Trescott's undisguised admiration and attention. Trescott was always on the lookout for fascinating women, yet in his whole life he had never been seriously in love. He was, however, young, Mrs. Catherwood reflected, and she sipped her tea and idly listened to their genial prattle.

The next night they met in Mrs. Catherwood's box at the opera. Mrs. Fox was radiantly beautiful in mauve satin with amethysts about her splendid neck and in her dark hair. The brilliant light was indulgent; she looked young and fresh, and her eyes smiled a happy welcome as Trescott took a seat directly behind her. The opera was "Faust," but they heard scarcely any, so engrossed were they in each other. It seemed to Trescott that something he had lost had come back to him again. And as he listened to Her low, sweet voice, telling him of herself, her southern home, surrounded with the fragrance of magnolia trees, he felt instinctively that she had already entered the radius of his life. When Marguerite was singing the jewel song, he leaned impulsively forward, a world of ardent sincerity in his tone: "I am going to see you so much; I want to know you so well."

"And you shall," she answered softly.

After that they met everywhere. It annoyed him when he learned she was divorced. He had an intense aversion to divorced women and always avoided them. Nevertheless, his interest in Mrs. Fox did not waver. She was a constant surprise to him, and he frankly liked her more than any woman he had ever known. He visited places he had never gone before in the hopes of meeting her, and gradually began to hold her in a closer relationship than he had ever drifted with a woman. At length it became a necessity to be with her and ask her advice upon matters that heretofore he would have scoffed at the mere idea of consulting with a woman. He could not account for it, but the experience was at least novel, and he persuaded himself to believe it was a rare, beautiful friendship between two congenial souls.

One late afternoon in February he met her descending Mrs. Catherwood's steps. She looked unusually lovely in velvet and soft dark furs, and there was glad recognition in her eyes as she extended her hand from a huge muff.

"I thought you were going to pass me by," she said reproachfully.

"No, no," he told her quickly; "I wasn't sure it was you for the fraction of a second. Where are you going?"

"Home," she answered; "will you come?"

It was the first invitation she had given him, and Trescott, with boyish impetuosity, bounded to the small blue brougham to assist her in. "I thank you," he said, as they whirled over the smooth asphalt.

Her apartments were as beautiful and luxurious as he had supposed. everything denoting her exquisite taste and personality. She removed her wraps, and they sat before the fire until only the coals lighted the room. Trescott, with the witchery of the twilight hour upon him and her soothing presence, talked incessantly, unburdening the most sacred of his thoughts, feelings, and dreams. She exerted a most curious charm over him, this singularly sweet, yet worldly wise, little woman, and being extremely young, the novelty of their close intimacy appealed more deeply to him.

After that he called regularly twice a week. Now and then he sent her exquisite white roses, because she had mentioned her preference for them, and he likened her to the purity of such flowers. There seemed nothing too good or beautiful for her, and he began to wonder how he had ever done without her, since she had become the best and sweetest part of his life. She helped him, encouraged him, and awakened ambitions he had thrown aside. In gaiety she was the most desirable companion, responding to his merriment with gay little laughs, and mirthful sallies. In silent moods she played and sang sweet old songs that he fancied he had heard in some dim long ago, possibly his childhood. And gradually, gradually they drifted, drifted.

One day they were discussing a recent, notorious divorce case. Mrs. Fox listened with smiling gravity as he expressed his pronounced views. When he had finished she looked up; the tragic light in her beautiful gray eyes deepened perceptibly.

"Why are you so bitter? One would naturally infer you had had experience."

"Not exactly of my own. You have heard, have you not, that my father divorced my mother? It was all equally as scandalous as that one the papers were so full of the other day. I have heard my father lost interest in everything. He lived abroad for years, and his marriage several months ago was a great surprise. I am glad, however, that some woman was capable of making him renew faith in things. But I—" he paused and gazed reflectively in the fitful log blaze, "I shall positively never marry."

"Why?" she asked in scarcely an audible tone, and as he glanced up he saw her face had paled and a momentary sense of annoyance seized him.

"Well," he said, after a few seconds, "I have been brought up on a rather disagreeable idea of marriage. The very memory of my mother is unpleasant; in fact, I dislike to remember such a woman was my mother. I do not doubt that my father was a cold-hearted, exacting sort of a chap, but there is no excuse for a wife—a mother—to forget. And I believe all women are either bad or good."

"Oh, please," she said, making a protesting gesture with her small, jeweled hand.

"I am really sincere in making such a statement. There can be no medium. If a woman takes one step from her pedestal, there is a smirch that can never be effaced."

"I wish you could believe differently," she murmured. "Surely you've known few women well, and there must be some justifiable divorces."

A slow smile crossed his face. Then, suddenly he rose and moved to her chair, catching her frail, white hand and pressing it with warmth.

"Yours was justifiable. I believe in you."

After he had gone she sat down in the chair he had occupied and cried softly.

That evening Trescott dined at Mrs. Catherwood's. As usual, the conversation drifted to Mrs. Fox. Trescott did not object; on the contrary, it pleased him.

"But, Ned," Mrs. Catherwood observed, turning a significant smile upon him, "surely the difference in your ages will be a serious drawback."

"Now, what on earth do you mean, my dear foolish Florence?" Trescott lighted a cigarette, and Mrs. Catherwood, with the habit of many years abroad still upon her, followed his example.

"Mean?" she tossed with a merry laugh. "Why, it's plain as day, Ned that she is hopelessly, violently, in love with you."

"Bosh!" Trescott exclaimed, smoking vigorously.

"It's true, nevertheless, you dear innocent! Come, Neddy, no one blames you for loving the charming Mrs. Fox, but marrying her—why that's a horse of a different color. And it's really rumored. Such things happen, too, and are not considered extraordinary."

"Of all rot!" At first Trescott laughed, then he frowned and tossed the half-smoked cigarette in the fire. "There is absolutely nothing between us but a beautiful friendship of the sweetest and purest nature. Yet, if it is possible that I have made a mistake and she really cares, as you say, I can never go to her again."

"Gracious!" exclaimed Mrs. Catherwood with a low, light laugh. "Would that honestly stop you, Neddy? What a conscience!"

"It might not stop me with another woman," declared Trescott, "but with her it is different. But can I do without her? She is everything, everything to me." He spoke as though he were talking to himself, scarcely aware of Mrs. Catherwood's presence.

"Then, my dear," she said slowly, while twisting her rings and watching their brilliancy, "if that is the case, your only cure is marriage."

He said nothing, and she went on swiftly: "It will be a tremendous shock to your friends. You know your tragic-eyed lady is divorced, and you have exploited your ideas on divorce so frequently that it's become rather a joke."

A momentary sensation of sickness at the heart stifled him, and in a few minutes he rose and said good-night.

For a week Trescott avoided Mrs. Fox. Finally, she sent a note beseeching him to come. With a half reluctance he went. She looked as lovely in her soft clinging gown of white crepe as the beautiful Bermuda lilies massed on the piano. He made some foolish excuses and sank into the comfortable chair that she had pushed forward, realizing at each minute the pitiful truth of Mrs. Catherwood's pitiless confidence.

"Are you in trouble?" she asked, a shade of anxiety sweeping over her delicate features.

"No," he replied with a forced laugh. "I am tired and somewhat despondent. Won't you sing?"

She went slowly to the piano, and as she passed the breath of a rare perfume she affected floated to his nostrils. He did not watch her, as had been his custom, but looked steadily in the blue light of the fire. Once before he had passed through a similar experience. At least, he had found himself in an unpleasant position. The girl was desperately in love, declaring he had encouraged her, while he had never given her anything but a frank comradeship. He remembered distinctly it had not affected him in the slightest. Now it was different, and why? Involuntarily, he sighed. The woman heard it and instantly arose. He was not aware that she had finished until he felt her hand, caressing in its tenderness, on his shoulder, and her warm lips against his forehead.

"Tell me," she pleaded piteously; "tell me what is wrong."

He almost shook her away. Her beauty, the perfume of lilies, the whole truth of her love vitally plain, angered him more at each moment.

"Wait!" he cried sharply. "We have made a horrible mistake. Perhaps I am more to blame, but I never dreamed you thought of me in such a light. I do not love you." He was fully aware that his tone and attitude were brutal, but he knew he must finish. "I did not intend it. I craved your friendship so that I was utterly blind to consequences. Forgive me, and if I go with your forgiveness, I won't feel the coward that I am."

The woman was leaning wearily against the chair. She looked every year of her true age, but there was a pitiful sadness about her mouth and in her wide, startled eyes.

"It was a mistake," she said calmly, yet her breath came fast and hard, and, as though to master herself, she placed her frail hand to her breast. "I did not intend to let it go on, but I could not prevent it. I love you," she raised burning, hungering eyes.

He buried his face in his hands and stammered some inarticulate words, which were drowned in his throat.

"Ah, but listen, dear one," she bent forward, a wild ring in her voice. "I love you as a mother loves a child, for you are my child!"

He sprang to his feet, his face white and drawn, the perspiration standing in beldy on his forehead.

"It is not worth while to go over the miserable story. He told you when you were old enough to ask for me that he divorced me because he thought me an unworthy wife and mother, and he compelled me to relinquish all rights to you, my own boy. He poisoned your mind against me until you finally forgot in some part of the world I existed—that is the word; life isn't much when all the sweetness is taken away. I waited all these years until I heard of his marriage and residence abroad, then I came, for my poor heart was hungry, starving for a sight of you. So I slipped quietly into your life to learn the nature of your feelings towards a mother you had never known. You could not help believing what you did. I can forgive you, dear, all that, and go away with the sweet satisfaction of having experienced the only breath of happiness I've known since I gave you birth."

For the brevity of a second a weird sensation of creepiness stole through him. Then he looked at her standing before him, wondrously lovely with a moistness in her gray eyes and an injured sadness quivering at her mouth.

"Mother!" he said, with a great hungering joy, and he clasped her to his heart and kissed her trembling lips.

PARK'S FLORAL MAGAZINE is a handsome monthly, and the oldest journal of its class in the world. Each number contains from 32 to 64 pages (mostly 64), and every page of reading abounds with appropriate illustrations and practical floral information. It is entirely floral, and just what every lover of a garden needs. It tells of new plants and flowers, of insect-pests and diseases and how to get rid of them.

CHOICE FLOWER SEEDS.

Larkspur, Double Branching, a glorious annual, each plant becoming a branching little tree crowned with exquisite double flowers of many rich colors.

Pansy, Giant Fragrant, a grand strain imported from a German specialist; plants stocky, compact, and covered the entire season with large, fragrant, rich-colored flowers.

Petunia, Superb Bedding, the most free-blooming, constant and showy of bedding plants; compact and a mass of bloom all season; new colors and variegations.

Phlox Drummondii, plants a foot high, covered the entire season with beautiful clusters of bloom in a wonderful variety of colors and variegations.

Phlox, New Japan, the most beautiful of summer flowers; plants bloom early, freely and continuously; flowers large, glowing in color and variegation, single and double.

Poppy, New Shirley, a glorious annual, surpassing all other annuals, when in bloom; flowers large, in masses, and showing most exquisite new colors.

Portulaca, Large-flowered, low, branching, succulent plants, lovely in stem and foliage, and gorgeous and everblooming in flower; white, rose, scarlet, yellow, salmon, striped.

Mixed Seeds, hundreds of flowers, old and new; yields a wonderful variety of kinds, something new every morning throughout the season. The value of these seeds are 5 cts. per package.

CHOICE VEGETABLE SEEDS.

Cabbage, Early Solid Cone, the earliest of Cabbage; solid heads, crisp, tender and delicious; every plant forms a fine head.

Cucumber, White Spine; of medium size, early, crisp, very productive, fine for slicing or pickling.

Onion, Danvers Yellow, produces fine, large Onions from seeds; the finest grown; very sweet, tender and mild; unsurpassed either raw or cooked; keeps well.

Radish, Mixed. This mixture is specially prepared from early, medium and late sorts, and will supply Radishes throughout the season.

Tomato, Matchless, the earliest of Tomatoes; very smooth, prolific, rich red, solid, even ripening, and free from rot or cracking; best for slicing or canning.

Turnip, Purple-top Globe, the improved sort from France; large, solid, sweet, tender and keeps well; decidedly the best Turnip that can be grown. The value of these seeds are 5 cts. per package.

These seeds are fresh and the magazine is of interest to every one who has a garden, either for flowers or vegetables. Make all remittances and address all communications to

OLD YORK ROAD CLUB.

Elaborate plans have been perfected for the spring season at the Old York Road Country Club, which goes into its second year with a membership list filled, numerous applicants on the waiting list, and every indication of a successful year under the direction of E. Clarence Miller, president, and an entertainment committee, the members of which are Mrs. Charles F. Fuerer, Mrs. A. T. Freeman, Mrs. Joseph L. Jones, Miss Caroline Thomson, Dr. E. N. Lippincott, Louis F. Paret, John R. Roberts, Leigh H. Shrigley, William T. Taylor and James R. Turner, chairman.

Among the events to take place at the clubhouse near Jenkintown, as prepared by the committee, are: Wednesday, April 3, luncheon in charge of Mrs. Joseph L. Jones and Miss Bertha Coyne, to be followed by a talk by Maurice Feud, on "Planting and Care of Bulbs;" Saturday, April 6, dance, in charge of Miss Mary L. Hallowell, Miss Emma Richards and Dr. E. N. Lippincott; Wednesday, April 10, meeting of the Current Events Club, with lecture by Miss Janet Richards; Saturday, April 12, Military 500, in charge of Mrs. Frank M. Acton, Mrs. J. Herbert Ervien, Mrs. Howard W. Trump, Dr. Horace Furman, Harry S. Hendrickson; Wednesday, April 17, Current Events Club; Saturday, April 20, germar, in charge of Miss Elizabeth Hendrickson, Miss Marie Hendrickson, Miss Helen Slifer, Howard Calverly, Jr., and George Slifer; Wednesday, April 24, cards, in charge of Mrs. Clinton W. Morgan, Mrs. Charles C. Palmer, Miss Anna Roberts; Saturday, April 27, dinner golfing event, in charge of the greens committee.

Max Silberman visited friends on Saturday.

J. F. Teifenbach visited city friends on Monday.

E. S. Jimeson has recovered from his sprained ankle.

Mrs. Albert Potts was a visitor to the city on Monday.

Hugh O'Neill visited friends at Souderton on Tuesday.

Henry Porter visited Horsham friends on Wednesday.

H. B. Baker visited friends in Warrington on Tuesday.

Mrs. Edwin Headly entertained friends on Wednesday.

H. F. Porter visited Fort Washington friends on Monday.

Mrs. Harris, of West avenue, will move to Philadelphia, on April 1.

After April 1st, there will be a number of first class dwellings unoccupied in the western part of our town.

C. Kern, of Roxborough, has rented the H. Clark house on Cedar street and will take possession on April first.

Dr. S. F. Wilson is spending a few days with his cousin, George Wilson, of Branchtown, before going to Northampton, Massachusetts.

Harry Wilkinson has a full stock of spring goods for business man's wants and housekeeper's needs in the hardware line.

Mr. Ward, of West avenue will move to New York this spring. Mr. Ward and his family have lived here for several years, and were faithful workers in the Baptist church.

Henry Wilbur, a prominent minister of the Society of Friends, will be at Abington Friends' meeting house, First day 3d month 31. Meeting at 10.30 a. m. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Pastor Barnes, of the M. E. church, shipped his furniture to Williamsport, Pa., on Friday. It is about thirty miles above Harrisburg, the church has a membership of over four hundred members, and pays a salary of $1100 per year. During his short stay here he has made many friends.

Mrs. J. Dressler, of Healy avenue, Jenkintown, was badly burned on the face, neck and body at her home early last Saturday. She attempted to throw some waste material from a pan into the cellar heater and the instant it reached the coals a sheet of flame shot from the opened heater door, burning the woman.

Jenkintown will be represented for the 1912 season by a strong baseball team, and indications point to a renewal of the oldtime baseball enthusiasm among local fans. The line-up of the team will, in all probablity, be: H. O'Neill, catcher; Frankenfield, pitcher; P. Mullen, first base; Flowers, second baseman; Sheehan, third base; Sheehan, shortstop; King, left field; T. O'Neill, centre field; Mullin, right field; manager, John King.

W. Harry Jones, proprietor of the Cottman House, Jenkintown, was summoned before the court at Norristown last Monday when the question of the renewal of his license was under consideration, and denied that he had failed to provide a meal for travelers. A party had come to his house after the regular meal hours and when his dining room was torn up. He kept a steam box from which he served oysters, fish cakes, eggs, coffee and light lunches from 5 a. m. until closing time. He offered to serve the parties in question with a meal of this character in a side room but they refused to accept this accommodation. The court made no announcement.

THE LORD OF THE MANOR SLEEPS

Ah! the Lord of the Manor now sleeps
In his lowly and grass-covered bed;
And his widow with sorrowing weeps,
For the Lord of the Manor is dead.
And no longer his vigil he keeps
Where his buildings and broad acres spread;
And his harvests no longer he reaps,
When the azure is smiling o'erhead.

In the midst of his towering trees
He delays not with listening ear,
As they sway in the billowing breeze
In the spring and the fall o' the year;
Ah! the songs of the birds and the bees,
And the music that summer sings clear,—
He will never again stir at these,
For he sleeps in the graveyard drear.

Still his whispering pine trees stand
His elegant dwelling beside;
Where he brought to his family land
His youthful and beautiful bride;
Oh! how proud was his manner and grand,
As he gallantly walked at her side;
But no longer he presses her hand,
For the Reaper has humbled his pride.

And she, in her vestments of woe,
Still visits the scenes of their youth;
And tenderly broods on the long ago,
With its visions of love and truth.
But her cheeks burn not with the crimson glow
They wore in her girlish days, in sooth;
Oh! when loyal lives are sundered so,
It awakens our tenderest ruth.

Not the rice in the east of the sun,
Or the set of the sun in the west,
With the glory of day just begun,
Or the splendor of day at its best,
Can awaken the slumbering one;
Or enkindle a glow in his breast;
For his labors and pleasures are done,
With the Lord of the Manor at rest.

MORE POTATOES PER ACRE

Do you want to increase your potato crop 10 to 57 bushels per acre and thereby increase your profits $5 to $57 per acre?

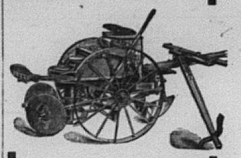
was used was 57 bushels per acre more than where one of the best of the "Picker" machines planted. It makes no misses, no doubles, injures no seed.



When seed is high as it is now, it pays to use this kind of Planter—saves 1 to 2 bushels of seed per acre.

Let it secure for you a perfect stand, a bigger yield and more profit. Ask your dealer to show you the Iron Age Planter, with or without fertilizer attachment. Write us for special booklet. This planter is but one tool in our complete line of Iron Age farm and garden implements. You should know them all.

IRON AGE

The set consists of six booklets, each one treating a subject relative to increasing yields and lowering cost of farm, garden and orchard crops. In each there is a MESSAGE FOR YOU. For instance, do you know how to plant 160 acres of potatoes, or any part of it, to obtain a 100 per cent. stand? Our booklet, "100 PER CENT. POTATO PLANTING," will tell. What is one message you should receive. "SAVING VINES AND TREES BY SPRAYING," "THOROUGH CULTIVATION," "GARDENING WITH MODERN TOOLS," "ECONOMY AND BETTER CROPS," and DIGGING POTATOES," contain many other messages. But we cannot deliver them until we have your address. It is, therefore, up to you to write us at once.

These booklets cost considerable money but they are worth it. A post-card brings them to you immediately. Address:

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS.

SEED POTATO FACTS.

Information for the Local Farmer, Who is Now Purchasing Seed—Size of Seed and its Influence on Crop.

Farmers of Montgomery and Bucks counties are now considering the seed potato question. Potatoes have sold at high prices all winter and seed is from one and a half to more than twice the price it was last year.

With seed high farmers should consider well its quality, carefully prepare and fertilize the ground, and in every way do what they can to secure a large crop.

Speaking generally, the yield of a crop of potatoes increases as the weight of the seed-tubers increases, but it is quite manifest that the increased yield resulting from the large tubers may be overbalanced by the increased cost of seed per acre. By planting very large seed, one might find the profits absorbed by the excessive amount of seed-potatoes used.

A number of experiments have been carried on regarding the comparative value of different sized pieces of seed-potatoes. As an average of a total of nearly one hundred experiments, it was found that pieces of seed cut to two eyes yielded 14 per cent, or 15 bushels, more than pieces cut to one eye; that quarters yielded 15 per cent., or seven bushels, more than pieces cut to two eyes; that potatoes cut in halves yielded 6 per cent., or 3 bushels more than potatoes cut to quarters; but that potatoes cut in halves yielded 8 per cent., or about 3 bushels, more than when whole tubers were used. These results were for the net salable crop per acre, after deducting the small tubers and the value of the seed.

The results, also apply to average conditions. If the season is a poor one the difference would not be so marked. But in general it pays to be generous with your seed. It costs as much to grow a poor crop as a good one, therefore do not cut seed too small, nor use small potatoes for seed.

NITRATE OF SODA FOR PLANTS.

A prominent trucker of Middletown, Pa., wrote to Prof. Surface and asked about the use of nitrate of soda, saying that he had tried it first on his wife's house plants, and had killed them. He wished to know how to use it as a plant stimulant, and received the following reply:

"You can apply nitrate of soda either by sowing it broadcast on the ground, or by diluting it in water, and applying it with a sprinkler. If you put it in water do not use more than a spoonful to a gallon. If you sow it broadcast, do not apply more than one hundred and fifty pounds to the acre. This means a very thin application for each plant or tree whatever kind it is.

"On plants in the house one-tenth teaspoonful to each plant is a proper application. It would be better to dissolve a spoonful in each gallon of water, and merely water the plants with this solution. You evidently used it far too strong. Nitrate of soda is one of the greatest plant stimulants known, but it is very easy to get too much of it at any one time. It should not be applied until after growth starts in the spring."

Robert McDowell, of Warrington, had a rib broken in a fall a few days ago.

Feed and Rest for Horses.

Feeding horses at least an hour and a half before harnessing them, and giving them a full hour at noon, is not only humane, but it is profitable to the owner. Horses shown these attentions last longer, do better service and are more free from ailments.

Training for Colt.

The profit and pleasure to be derived from the use of horses depends upon how much they have been trained. Every colt should be trained before he is put into hard work on the farm.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Linseed meal contains bone-forming matter.

Horses with tender feet need lots of attention.

No domestic animals increase or decrease as rapidly as pigs.

Parasites common to sheep infest southern flocks just as elsewhere.

It is a mistake if the hog is not fed in a clean place free from dust and mud.

It should be remembered that a horse can do more than his feet will stand.

Failure to secure profits in hog raising are usually due to mismanagement.

Good clean food, pure water, fresh air and clean surroundings such as stables and yards will keep stock healthy and increase the profits on the place.

Any work or exercise which produces severe strain on the muscles, especially of the hindquarters, is liable to cause abortion in mares.

One of the first essentials for the well-being and comfort of live stock is the water supply, which, upon the average farm, is entirely inadequate to the needs of the stock.

A draft horse is valued solely for his utility. It is true good looks increase his usefulness in all lines of commerce where advertising is needed, but the great traffic mover of the world that delivers the railroad's burdens at each end of the route pays his way in power.

HORSHAM CLUB PROGRAM

Questions to be Discussed at the Next Meeting.

The Horsham Farmers' Club will meet this Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Hallowell, of Horsham, when the program will be as follows:

"Give some account of the corn contest in Georgia and the manner in which the boy treated the crop to secure 226 bushels per acre." Phineas P. Gheen.

"What are the essentials of a good piece of furniture?" Israel Ely.

"Describe the simple house furnishings among which you would like to live." Alice Michener.

"When was anthracite coal first mined in Pennsylvania? When and by whom was it first taken to Philadelphia?" Newton E. Wood.

"Which is best to do, to be just or to be generous. If you cannot be both?" Elizabeth Comly.

"Which is the worst fault, to give undue praise to the undeserving in order to encourage them to do better or not to give praise where it is due?" Elizabeth W. Ely.

"Has the thick coat of ice the past winter done much damage to the crops?" William J. Hallowell.

Highway department engineers surveying in Bucks county say Doylestown lies 428 feet above sea level, while the country from Torresdale to Morrisville is mostly 20 feet.

On account of an epidemic of diseases the Yardley schools have been closed until after the Easter holidays. Seventy-eight pupils are down with either mumps, chicken pox or measles.

As Miss Fanny Chapman, of Doylestown, was motoring along the mile road between Davisville and Southampton, Saturday, her big Packard automobile sank into the mud up to the hubs and was unable to get out under its own power. Six horses failed to move it out and it was only after men with shovels and planks, and William R. Mercer, Jr., sent his Packard to the scene that it was rescued from the mire.

GOOD PRICES AT SALE.

There was a big crowd and lively bidding at the public sale of G. W. Rubinkam, near Jamison, last Monday. Mr. Rubinkam is a liberal advertiser. Some of the prices were as follows: Horses, $218, $210, $205, $180, $165. Cows $40 to $55, one, snow hay $4[illegible]. Mother $155. Corn 59 cents bushel. Seed corn $1.00, oats 59 cents bushel, potatoes $1.50 bushel, other things in proportion.

A meeting in the interest of good roads was held at the residence of Joseph Strassmuller, near St. Leonard station, in Northampton township, on Wednesday, March 27th. The Buck road, which is usually very bad in the spring of the year, was the principal highway discussed.

Relieves Backache Instantly

Sloan's Liniment is a great remedy for backache. It penetrates and relieves the pain instantly—no rubbing necessary—just lay it on lightly.

Here's Proof.

"I had my back hurt in the Boer War and in San Francisco two years ago I was hit by a street car in the same place. I tried all kinds of dope without success. Two weeks ago I saw your liniment in a drug store and got a bottle to try. The first application caused instant relief, and now except for a little stiffness, I am almost well."

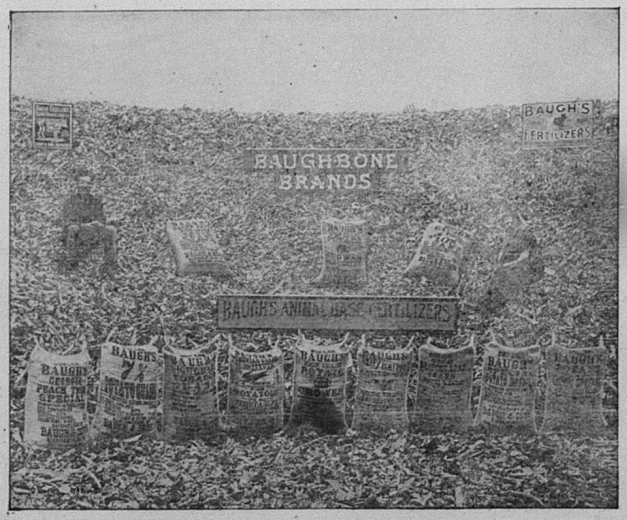
BAUGH FERTILIZERS

HEADQUARTERS FOR FINELY GROUND PURE ANIMAL BONES!
HIGH GRADE ANIMAL BASE GOODS!

Some farmers believe that they cannot get absolutely pure animal bones finely ground. Come and see for yourself. We manufacture the Baugh brand of Finely Ground Animal Bones for direct application to the soil in absolutely pure form. Purity is guaranteed.
We also manufacture strictly High Grade Animal Base Fertilizers which are assimilable plant foods and soil manures of superior quality.



OLDEST BRAND IN AMERICA

Here are some of the reasons why the Baugh Fertilizers give to farmers dollar for dollar of cash value, and bring many hundredfold returns in crop yields, always leaving the soil in good heart:
—The valuable Baugh formula provide complete crop and soil manures, the nitrogen or ammonia of which is derived from dissolved Animal Bones and other high class Animal Base products, in combination with chemical ammoniates. Included are high grade dried ground Fish, Blood, Animal Tankage, Nitrate Soda, Sulphate Ammonia made from Animal Bones.
—The success of the Superior Baugh Processes of manufacture, which is based upon their distinctive originality.
—The same personal oversight and determination of individual thought and action which has been maintained by the house of Baugh since it was established in the year 1855.
—Correct business principles and good faith with farmers, which is our abiding policy.
